It looks as if the dear merchants are getting afraid that some of their victims will take advantage of the mail order business if such a bill is passed and they want you to help hold the victims in their grasp, and for this inglorious work you have signified your services. Are you not aware, kind senator, that the merchants have already everything in their own hands? They not only fix the price of the goods they sell, but they control the price on all the commodities their customers have to exchange. Such being the positive condition, I hope you will not land your great power (for good or evil) to help the merchants association in their skinning game that is already played for all there is in it.

Press Opinion of Roosevelt's Flop

Tillman Corners the President.

(Buffalo Times.)

A climax in the rate bill discussion in Washington was reached on Saturday when Senator Benjamin R. Tillman publicly exposed the fact that the president and deceive the country by the sort of senatorial manipulation units the corporation lawyers in the senate and is now willing to stand for a rate bill on the lines desired by the railroads. Senator Benjamin R. Tillman publicly exposed the fact that the president can deceive the country by the sort of senatorial manipulation units the corporation lawyers in the senate and is now willing to stand for a rate bill on the lines desired by the railroads. Asad, Man to Fool With.

(Pittsburg Dispatch.)

When Senator Aldrich unloaded the Hepburn bill upon Senator Tillman with the hope of discrediting the policy of the president by placing it in charge of a radical Democrat the joke was keenly relished in corporate circles. Subsequent developments have proved that the senaton from South Carolina is a bad man to fool with. He is more than able to hold his own in any contest of wits and his shrewdness in having former Senator Chandler reduce to writing the negotiations between the White House and himself produces an awkward situation. Since the president recalled Tillman's invitation to the dinner to Prince Henry the senator has steadfastly kept his vow not to cross the threshold of the White House during the present administration. This compelled the president, if he wished to consult with the senator in charge of the administration, to use an intermediary, Mr. Chandler. But Mr. Tillman finds it a good rule in politics, as in business, to take nothing for granted. He is, therefore, now able to produce the documents giving Mr. Chandler's report of the president's advice sent to Tillman. Mr. Chandler's advice sent to Tillman, thus corroborating the statements and as they agree with the news of the negotiations. (Pittsburg Dispatch.)

It shows that in 1962 the telephone systems of the country operated more than three-fourths of the wire mileage reported for both telephones and telegraphs, giving employment to seven-tenths of the wage-earners, paid more than two-thirds of the wage-earners, paid more than two-thirds of the total revenue and paid more than two-thirds of the total expenses.

For the commercial systems the mileage was 4,779,571 and the number of telephones $2,25,981; for the mutual systems the mileage was 790,166 and the number of telephones $9,365, and for the independent lines the mileage was 49,956 and the number of telephones $5,475.

The number of salaried employes engaged in the telephone service was 14,952 and the average number of wage-earners $4,628. The amount paid in salaries was $3,985,856, and in wages $25,387,35.
